Beyond Burnout: 10 Leadership Strategies for Protecting Educator Mental Health

Kat Pastor

School counseling leaders are deeply committed to supporting students, staff, and systems—but too often, that commitment comes at the expense of their own well-being. In an era of increasing demands, secondary trauma, and role overload, prioritizing mental health is no longer optional—it is a leadership imperative.

This session explores 10 practical, research-informed strategies school counseling leaders can use to protect their mental health while sustaining high-impact leadership. Participants will examine common stressors unique to counseling leadership roles and learn actionable approaches related to boundaries, mindset, workload management, relational support, and systemic self-advocacy. Designed to be immediately applicable, this session equips leaders with tools to model healthy practices for their teams while increasing personal resilience and long-term effectiveness.

ABOUT THE SPEAKER

Kat has passionately served as a student and educator advocate for over 20 years in the roles of coach, student council advisor, school counselor at the secondary level and financial aid counselor/coordinator of student employment and adjunct professor at the post-secondary level. Through Kat's leadership, her school counseling department received both state and national recognition, including the American School Counselors Association (ASCA) RAMP recognition in 2020. Kat has facilitated professional development with various state and national associations, along with individual schools and districts. Kat exudes a commitment to community, having served on numerous local, state and national associations, boards and committees. She holds a Bachelor of Science in Psychology, a Masters in Education in Student Affairs and School Counseling from Northern Arizona University. Kat was named the ASCA 2016 National School Counselor of the Year and Northern Arizona University's President's Alumni Awardee in 2021.

Kat will also be presenting a breakout session.

1. Relationships and Belonging: Why Students Struggle in Isolation, but Thrive in Connection

Amy Baltimore

Students can often appear socially integrated, but instead they feel unseen or unsafe in the learning environment. In that mindset they struggle, and sometimes, refuse to engage in learning.

This workshop introduces practical ways educators can diagnose disconnection, distinguish healthy solitude from harmful isolation, and build school-wide systems of consistent relational experiences that foster a culture of belonging.

Participants leave with simple, actionable strategies to help student brains thrive as they anticipate safety, engage in positive relational connections, and develop a readiness to learn. Participants leave with simple, actionable strategies to help student brains thrive as they anticipate safety, engage in positive relational connections, and develop a readiness to learn.

ABOUT THE SPEAKER

Dr. Amy Baltimore is a former missionary kid who grew up experiencing first-hand what it is like to serve the needs of children with deep developmental trauma. She began her career by leaning into her passion for supporting the positive growth and development of students through school counseling. As time went on, she realized the adults need just as much support as the students. So, she stepped into the role of serving as a district leader for school counseling...currently with Metro Nashville Public Schools.

Her professional experiences also include serving on the Board of Directors for the Tennessee School Counselor Association, and on advisory councils for the Tennessee Department of Education. She has been an adjunct professor and frequent speaker at various higher ed events and state conferences. She is a Nationally Board Certified Counselor and a certified trainer for Restorative Practices, Building Strong Brains (ACEs/PCEs), The 6 Pillars of Trauma-Informed Schools, and Youth Mental Health First Aid.

Amy is happily married and has two amazing children who have grown and flown. She loves any activity involving sunshine and warm weather. On any given sunny day, you can find her at the lake on her paddleboard, or on a bicycle riding the greenway, or hiking with her husband toward one of the many waterfalls found in Middle Tennessee.

Amy will also be presenting two breakout sessions.

2. Repair Over Punish: Rethinking Discipline Through a Trauma Lens
